1 ... The entrance portal. It winks out of existence once all characters have entered the vault and can not be reactivated.

2 ... The red portal. This portal is only active when the red switch on Platform D is activated and the red gem glows a rich ruby red.

3 ... The green portal. This portal is only active when the green switch on Platform B is activated and the green gem glows a rich emerald green. This is the only portal active as the party enters the vault.

4 ... The blue portals. These portals are only active when the blue switch on Platform C is activated and the blue gem glows a rich sapphire blue.

5 ... The Cyan portal. This portal is only active when both the switches on platform B and C are deactivated.

6 ... The Magenta portal. This portal is only active when both the switches on platform D and C are deactivated.

7 ... The Yellow portal. This portal is only active when both the switches on platform B and D are deactivated.

8 ... The exit portal. The only way out of the shielded Vault. This portal of ominous black fog is only active when all three switches on the Platforms B, C and D are active.

A ... Upon entering the Vault the heroes land on this platform. At the start only the green portal from here to platform B is active. It is otherwise nondescript.

B ... At the center of this platform sits a pedestal crowned by what looks like a large emerald. At the start it is slightly depressed and glows a rich green.

C ... At the center of this platform sits a pedestal crowned by what looks like a large sapphire.

what looks like a large ruby.

E ... On a massive stone altar rests a book bound in leather and steel. It shows the first reader the true name of any one person and all there is to know about that individual.

F ... Another seemingly empty platform. One of its three portals is the only exit from the vault.

Many reasons could drive an adventurer to search for the infamous book of true names. Many rumors surround it but only few facts are known.

Still you managed to find the vault where this fabled text has been hidden. Amidst a vast nothingness so empty it hurts the eyes the portal has deposited you on a simple platform of stone fenced in by a rusty iron fence and a few other portal arches.

One of these portals is broken while another is filled by a warm and welcoming green glow and the third is empty. Just then the portal that led you here, the fourth on this platform, winks out behind you.

A short distance away you can see five more stone platforms similar to the one you stand on. On three you can make out pedestals crowned by large gems. On another platform you see a stone altar, a large leather and steel bound book resting on it. One of the gems, on a platform with another green glowing portal glows in a rich green color itself.

Could this really be the fabled book of true names?
