

THE CURTAIN RISES.
A NARRATOR STEPS UPON THE STAGE,
ADDRESSING THE ASSEMBLED THROG.

0 Announcer

"Feast your eyes on a tale of a legendary ring,
about a regal king, magical wonders, spectral ghosts and devious spies. As the story reveals, fate ensures everything must come full circle!"

1 Prologue

For decades long you served the king,
No doubts about his rule you'd bring,
For forty years his word brought gain,
Each challenge met, no loss, no pain.

You ventured with him, side by side,
Then called to court when youth had died.
To counsel him as once you fought,
In wisdom now, as once in thought.

One day a scout returned with speed,
A ring in hand, a fateful deed.
King Pear then saw, and sighed aloud,
The ring returns, my end avowed.

"This ring has come, full circle to my hand,
In all our ends, wrongs must rightful stand.
Will you, dear friends, stand by my side,
Aid me again, this final fight?"

3 Memory 1

At castle gates where perils rise,
A choice between storm and brother's ties.
With fate's own balance held so tight,
The curtain lifts—what path is right?
